A Matter of Perspective

Affordable caravan mirrors by Rameder

A person will need to acquire a different set of driving skills when towing a camper or some other type of large trailer for the first time: A greater turning circle is required, the rear view is partially blocked, and backing up is more difficult. One should always allow a generous safety distance to parked cars and oncoming traffic. Mountable caravan mirrors by Rameder provide practical help for novices and experts alike as these significantly expand the driver's field of vision and constantly remind the driver of the load in tow. Europe's leading tow-bar provider offers the universal model for only EUR 8.99 per mirror at www.rameder.eu.

Mounting requires neither drilling nor screws: Practical tensioning elements ensure a quick attachment that will not damage the car. The mirrors can be attached on both sides; Rameder recommends using the mirrors as a pair. In fact, additional mirrors may even be obligatory in some countries or at least some cases: Although paragraph 56 of the German Road Traffic Registration Ordinance does, for example, not specifically stipulate this, it does suggest their usage: "Motor vehicles must have [...] 2 to 3 mirrors or other equipment for indirect viewing, and these mirrors must be [...] attached in such a way so that the vehicle operator [...] can observe all relevant traffic occurrences while driving – and also while hauling a trailer."
